Payable on Demand olear understanding of the question which is presented by this bill, I wish to state briefly the present position of the income tax. The tax for the year ending December 21, 1860

ber 31, 1869, was levied on the 1st of March, 1870, and paid during the month of April, 1870, and was to be levied and paid, under the terms of the act imposing 1t, up to that time, "and no longer." By the act of July 14, 1870, from sections six to sixteen, inclusive, the act is respected. to sixteen, inclusive, the act is re-enacted for the years 1870 and 1871, at two and a than during those two years.

The seventeenth section of the act of July 14, 1870, exempted dividends and interest paid by the corporations after the lst of August, 1870, and continued in force such parts of the former law as were necessary to enforce the collection of taxes and penalties then due but unpaid.

The fifteenth and sixteenth sections reimposed a tax at two and a half per sent on dividends and coupons for 1871, the five per cent. paid up to August 1, 1870, being considered as equivalent to two and a half per cent. for the whole year; and that, as I understood at the time the bill was passed, was the reason of the conference committee for exempting those dividends and interest from income tax for the remainder of the year. The pending bill proposes to repeal all that part of the act of 15th July, 1870, which re-enact-

But a few weeks now intervene until the tax will be assessed. There have been such loud and frequent complaints against this tax, there have been so many demands for its repeal, that decisive action should be taken now.

I addressed the Senate during the last session on this question at somewhat greater length than is my habit; and I do not propose now any repetition of what I then said, nor even any extended summary of the remarks I then made. I contended unjust, unequal, inquisitorial, and unconstitutional; but I shall confine myself now o show briefly that what was unequal and unjust under the former law is more glarin its inequality and injustice under present, that it is unnecessary, and that true policy calls for its repeal.

The two points, then, which I wish

The two points, then, which I wish to make in the very brief address that I propose to submit to the Senate on this subject this morning are, that this tax is unjust and that it is unnecessary.

First, as to its injustice. Under the former law an inequality existed, which the chairman of the Finance Committee himself admitted ought to be remedied, but which the Senate when brought fair. nimself admitted ought to be remedied, but which the Senate, when brought fairly to vote upon a proposal to remedy it, refused to redress, and which now remains an aggravating injustice, double in its departure from the measure of right. That inequality was this, and it is one so clarify, that I cannot veferin from each claring that I cannot refrain from again adverting to it. The law professed to ex-empt all incomes under $1,000 from tax-ation, but left all that large class of per-sons, widows and orphans, who had their whole annual incomes derived from corporate dividends and interest subject to the tax. They were kept out of sight. Their scanty store was diminished by the pelling the officers of the government, compelling the officers of the corporation to deduct five per cent. from every dividend and coupon, whether the recipient had $5 that the least able to bear it, with incomes under $1,000, paid income tax, while all other classes, having incomes under $1,000 bear it. Are not made that deduction for the reason that I have no figures which will enable me to ascertain what it will be, but I intend before I close to $1,000. r $5,000 of income. Thus one class, and have it made up from various sources and have to make a return of the sources from which it is derived. In making this return they bring in these dividends and interests received from corporations, add them with their other receipts, and then the Government gives them credit for the taxes paid on them and deducts their amount from the aggregate. What is the practical result? The rich man has refunded to him by the Government the tax years.

Mr. 8. have it made up from various sources and paid upon corporate dividends and interest, while the widow or family of orphans while the widow or family of orphans who have paid the same tax upon a pittance of fifty or five hundred dellars have no means of being relieved from it or having it returned. What a spectacle for a great, magnanimous, and just Government, making classes of rich and poor, and exacting a tax from the rich man at one extreme, from the poor at another, and leaving all arranges between the exand leaving all persons between the ex-tremes free of tax! That is the practical operation of this income law, to tax the widow and orphan who have their whole means invested in corporate bonds or in corporate stock upon their income if it does not exceed fifty or one hundred dolars a year, and then all persons between that income of fifty or one hundred dol-lars a year and $2,000 go free; and when you got up to $2,000, then you begin again. That is the practical operation of the income tax, taxing the rich at one extreme, taxing the poor at the cher, and leaving the great mass go free. But let us pass from this feature to that which is claimed as the great merit of the income tax by those who advocate its recention, namely, that it is paid by but few tention, namely, that it is paid by but few wish to create insimpression that it is people and those who are able to bear it.

The latter part of the proposition I have the income tax; it is that of all internal have not to be universally true. It is revenue. The exact proportion of assessing the description of the best estimate that could be made. That, if it be added to what I have shown not to be universally true. It is people and those who are able to boar it.
The latter part of the proposition I have shown not to be universally true. It is not paid in all cases by those who are test able to bear it, but, on the contrary, is paid by many who are least able to bear
it. The former part of the proposition I admit, that it is borne by few. I proceed over to show how few becames I look upon now to show how few, because I look upon this as one of its worst features; not that it is a bad thing to make rich men pay taxes, but that it is a bad and a dangerous JOHN O'NEILE. thing for the law making power purposely to introduce any inequality, either of rights or burdens, among its citizens. The true American theory is that we will demend equal rights, and are all willing to bear our fair chare of burdens in the Government.

How, then, will this law operate? I have asked for a statement from the Treasury Department of the number of persons who paid income tax for the year ending December 31, 1869, and the number of districts that under the law of 1870 will pay less than $1,000 tax. The following is the reply I have received:

Sir: In compliance with your request, I have the honor to transmit herewith a statement showing the number of persons assessed on their incomes for the calendar year 1869 in each of the classes below named. The income tax of 1869 was assessed in March, 1870.

Whole, proceeding to consider the bill to repeal so much of the act approved July 14, 1870, entitled "An act to reduce internal taxes, and for other purposes," as continues the income tax after the 31st day of December, A. D. 1860.

Mr. Scott, of Pennsylvania, said: Mr. President, in order that we may have a clear understanding of the question which is presented by this bill, I wish to state the same officer who made this state.

Hon. John Scott, unusu cleares and the latter, unusu cleares and the latter, unusu cleares and latter, u ion that the ballance will be considerable larger than appears from the foregoing estimates. cent. it will leave us only $8,453,725 as the whole amount realized from the tax upon individual incomes in the whole coun-"The sum of $22,338,278 27 is the calimate for public works. The appropriations for these objects for the present year are less than twelve million dollars, and it is reasonable to presume that the appropriations for the next year will not much priations for the next year will not much exceed that amount."

Thus we have the statement that an analysis developes facts tending to sustain the opinion that the ballance will be considerably larger; and by way of illustrating that he give us one of these items, and in that one alone there is a difference of there may be in the others, for the analysis according to his own estimate will be paid we have $50,000,000 of the national deb ompting dividends declared from January to August, 1870, from liability to this tax. That case is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, on appeal, and, if the ruling of Mr. Justice Strong be affirmed, that amount, about $6,000,000, will be taken off. We silk now that the present Commissioner of Internal Revenue has, since his induction into office, decided that dividends declared from August, 1870, until December 31, 1870, are also exempt, so that thus far we exempt entirely all the dividends that ing the year 1870.

Now if you take the tax upon the interest on bonds, $1,869,369 34, and on salaries, $1,109,526 42, the whole of them would be $2,978,995 76; but under the present income tax they would realize but the salaries $1,1005 20. would be $2,978,895 76; but under the present income tax they would realize but the half of that amount; so that if there more than $43,597,774. That would the half of that amount; so that if there more than $43,000.000: we reduced it the hair of that amount; so that if there was a tax on salaries and we get the tax on the interest upon bonds we should have $1,499,447 33. Then levyng this tax on individual incomes $8,453,726, we should get for 1870 $9,943,172 33. Any additional amount that is to be obtained when the income tax, and that is only about the income tax, and that is only about the income tax, and that is only about the income tax.

get for 1870 $9,943,172 33. Any addition on all amount that is to be obtained must be by lingation, unless you hold that during this year salaries are liable to income tax, a question I have understood upon which there is some difference. They were eqempt during the past year for the reason that they had paid five per cent. tax during 1870, until the passage of the law, and therefore, latter the lat of August, 1870, none was collected from them.

Now is this worth the bad feeling, the litigation, and the expense that must be incurred to get it?

Mr. Conking. incurred to get it?

Mr. Conkling. If the honorable Sena-

all other classes, having incomes under $1,000, were exempt. Now, how have we remedied that? By increasing the exemption to $2,000, and reducing the tax to two and one-half per cent. but still taxing the widow and the orphan the two and one-half per cent. upon all beneath $2,000. Thus you impose two and one-half per cent upon one class of incomes under $2,000, and all other classes go free.

But it does not stop there. The persons who have $2,000 income, as a general rule, have it made up from various sources and Mr. Conkling. Having interrupted my friend, I beg to make this suggestion in addition: I find in many directions that claims are being collected from judges and other State officers who have paid an income tax, and a presentation is being made now to the Treasury by way of reclamation, the courts having decided that the tax, as far as 'respectation and they all insist. State officers, was void, and they all insisting not only that it cannot be collected hereafter, but that they have a right to penitentiaries more revenue receive back what has been paid in past tax upon the salaries of

Mr. Scott. If the Senator will recur to last session he will find that I stated then that the income tax, not only upon State officers but upon the salary of every Federal judge and upon that of the President of the United States, was unconstitutional, and was prohibited by that provision of the Constitution which prevents Congress from diminishing their salaries during their term of office. I did not wish again as I said in the outset, to repeat every from customs are seeingth to have been $57, 729,472; and yet by the set of July 14, 1870, we took off $23,000,000 of the reversion as I said in the outset. to repeat every from customs and the receipts for again, as I said in the outset, to repeat enue from customs, and the receipts for any portion of that argument, but embrace it in what I say here, that litigation will follow the imposition and the continuous that there will be no diminution there, but that the receipts from customs and the continuous conti tinuance of this income tax. Now, I call attention to the expense of collecting the internal revenue. In the report of the Scoretary of the Treasury for 1870, I find the following, on page 156 of the tall reports of the second any testimony or evidence or report showing that the income tax costs more to collect than any other, because I shall be prepared to show; I think, that it costs less than any other.

Mr. Scott. The expenses of assessing and collecting the internal revenue taxes are so blended in the official reports that it is impossible to 'extract from them the relative proportion of the one and of the other. I have no data for that purpose. I cannot make them. But I here wish to correct a statement that has been made public in regard to the present Commission.

Mr. Scott. I have seen the statement made, and not contradicted, that that was public in regard to the present Commis-sioner of Internal Revenue, and to quote him as authority for what I state. He of Ways and Means in the House of Reppublic in regard to the present Commishim as authority for what I state. He has been quoted as stating that the income tax costs more to collect than it realizes. That is not correct, I believe. OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE. WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1871.

The same officer who made this state-ment informs me in another one-that upon the basis of 1869 the estimated revenue from the income tax at five per cent. for 1870 would be $26,150,000. Bear in mind ment informs me in another onethat upon the basis of 1869 the estimated revenue from the income tax at five per cent. for 1870 would be $26,150,000. Bear in mind that is at five per cent. New, from this deduct the 180,925 persons who will be entirely relieved, and deduct also from the remaining 94,923 fifty dollars less that each will pay than they paid in the former year, and it takes $0,142,550 off that $26,150,000. That would leave us for this year $16,907,450, provided the tax was at velopes facts tending to sustain the opinyear $16,907,450, provided the tax was at five per cent; but at two and a half per

It the year 1800 there was collected from the bank dividends, $3,573,272 45; from canal companies, $251,048 75; from insurance companies, $261,048 75; from railroads, $2,898,802 31; from turnpike companies, $32,289 24; from interest on bonds $1,809,809 34; from salaries, $1,109,520 42. All these will be reduced one half more All these will be reduced one half upon the supposition that they will be collected at all. But the dividends from January to August, 1870, are in litigation. If Senators will turn to the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, they will find that a case was tried in the circuit court of the United States before Judge Strong, and that he there rendered a decision ex-ompting dividends declared from January to August, 1870, from liability to this tax.

That is not correct, I believe. The statement which he did make was that the income tax costs more to collect in proportion than any other internal revenue tax.

Mr. Sherman. I will ask the Senstor if the Commissioner of Internal Revenue says that, or has said it to anybody?
